

Ragnhild Lund Ansnes is an author, journalist, motivational speaker and broadcaster. She is the author of three books about Liverpool FC and was the editor for the Norwegian translation of Bill Shankly's autobiography and the ghost writer for Bruce Grobbelaar's recent autobiography Life in The Jungle.

She was the first woman in history to write official club books for Liverpool Football Club.

Her speciality is storytelling and to make people open up in conversations with her - for books, on stage, for TV, podcasts and radio. She has done several storytelling projects for big companies in order for them to sell more or build a better culture after company fusions.

Harvey learned the importance of having a healthy company culture around 30 minutes into his first day, of his first 'proper job', for all the wrong reasons. Since that day, having processed through the ranks in a number of corporates within the Banking and recruitment sector, his regard for the importance of 'getting this stuff right' only strengthened.

Harvey is an NLP Trainer, business coach and keynote speaker, specialising in working to build successful businesses by helping to create and embed unwavering company cultures. He is an entrepreneur at heart, having co-founded a mediation practice in 2015 – Van Beers Mediation

Founder and creative director of Opus Media, Paul has considerable expertise in storytelling for business, marketing, promotions and new media. Paul built up his experience in the highly competitive TV industry,

During his time with Opus Media, Paul has worked with numerous organisations, telling their business stories through targeted TV & online video advertising.

Paul has produced and directed projects on local and national levels for clients including Subway, Barnardo's, Liverpool FC, Harcourt, Asentiv and the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Paul continues to develop his knowledge of storytelling for business by hosting a podcast called Rule the World: The Art & Power of Storytelling.